New flights and packages make Alpine Habitats the perfect Snowies destination

Alpine Habitats – the Snowy regions’ newest and ecologically sustainable 4 ½ star accommodation option, is a great location for a getaway over the cooler months. And with new flights into the Snowy Mountains, plus three new accommodation packages, it’s now even easier to get there and experience it for yourself.

The new Snowy Mountains Airport, formerly Cooma Airport, is set to reopen with Aeropelican Air Services flying daily services out of Sydney from 11 June 2010. With direct flights from $129 each way it makes the trip to the NSW snowfields even easier .

When you get there make Alpine Habitats your base as it’s close to Thredbo and Jindabyne, as well as the Kosciuszko National Park. With three new fantastic, fun and affordable packages, Alpine Habitats is the best place for couples looking for a snowies adventure, or families just wanting a break away from it all. The brand new packages include:
